

Elizabeth Walcott-Hackshaw

A Professor of French Literature and Creative Writing at the University of the West Indies, she has published scholarly articles and essays on Francophone Caribbean Literature and co-edited several works including Border Crossings: A Trilingual Anthology of Caribbean Women Writers (2012); Methods in Caribbean Research: Literature, Discourse, Culture; Echoes of the Haitian Revolution (1804–2004) (2009); and Reinterpreting the Haitian Revolution and its Cultural Aftershocks (2009). She has also published creative works, and her short stories have been widely translated and anthologised. Four Taxis Facing North (2007), her first collection of short stories was considered one of the best books of the year by the Caribbean Review of Books. Mrs B, a novel, was shortlisted for “Best Book of Fiction” in the Guyana Prize for Literature in 2014.

Ashes

Sometimes leaves would fall from the trees, and sometimes ashes would just appear in the air, wriggling like black worms. I had just got home from a long day and was lying on a sofa on the veranda. Everything was complete now, the final payment made to the lawyer. Everything so easy, the secretary handed me the documents and explained carefully and slowly the next simple step. I handed over the final payment, she examined my cheque politely, with a cursory glance, assuring me that I was trustworthy, that it was fine, but all the while I was hoping that there would be a fault somewhere, something to cause a further delay, giving me just a little more time. The last documents were handed over with a gentle smile, a paper clip, and a manila envelope: “Could you sign here please?” “Is that it?” I
