Final Test

PART ONE:

Quotes: Match the quote to the character who spoke it. Then tell who they were speaking to.
Remember, some quotes may be from characters speaking to themselves.

- "They should perplex me. I should wonder what courage - which is the virtue they most value - has to do with a metal ring through your nostril. Instead my eyes cling to them wherever they go."
 Speaker: _____ Spoken to: _____
- "The reason for the simplicity isn't disdain for uniqueness, as the other factions have sometimes interpreted it. Everything - our houses, our clothes, our hairstyles - is meant to help us forget ourselves and to protect us from vanity, greed, and envy, which are just forms of selfishness. If we have little, and want for little, and we are all equal, we envy no one. I try to love it."
 Speaker: _____ Spoken to: _____
- "They taught us that physical contact is powerful, so I have been wary of it since I was young."
 Speaker: _____ Spoken to: _____
- "I open my eyes and thrust my arm out. My blood drips onto the carpet between the two bows. Then, with a gasp I can't contain, I shift my hand forward, and my blood sizzles on the coals. I am selfish. I am brave."
 Speaker: _____ Spoken to: _____
- "Think about it," he says, a faint smile curling his lips. "You don't get to pick again."
 Speaker: _____ Spoken to: _____
- "It wasn't something I wanted to watch," he says.
 Speaker: _____ Spoken to: _____
- "Because we have something they want. Valuing knowledge above all else results in a lust for power, and that leads men into dark and empty places. We should be thankful we know better."
 Speaker: _____ Spoken to: _____
- "Those who blamed aggression formed Amity. Those who blamed ignorance became the Erudite. Those who blamed duplicity created Candor. Those who blamed selfishness made Abnegation. And those who blamed cowardice were the Dauntless."
 Speaker: _____ Spoken to: _____
- "In our factions, we find meaning, we find purpose, we find life." "Apart from them, we would not
